

Friends with an old book: Task 2

I chose this first spread for two different reasons. First of all, in almost all pages that include a drawing, the left page is left empty, which is quite strange in our times and with our advanced printing techniques. Secondly, the drawing is decorated in a very unusual way.

This spread shows a theme that runs throughout the book, namely the listing with letters that is not accompanied by pictures like it is usual for modern books.

What strikes me about this spread is how many chapters there are on a single page.
